

EXPLANATORY NOTE TO THE APPLIANCE LISTS

The appliance lists group the electrical and electronic appliances for which a Recupel contribution is charged. They are divided into 10 main categories based on the categories identified in the European Directive 2002/96/3G.

These 10 categories form the basis for the appliance lists.

The appliances within these categories break down into 'household' and 'professional' appliances.

The household or professional character of the appliances is determined not by the environment or the user, but by objective criteria such as weight and capacity.

Each category has a number consisting of 6 digits:

- the first two digits represent the European WEEE category;
- the next two digits indicate the year during which the appliance lists were implemented, i.e. '11' for the current lists;
- the last two digits refer to the subcategory. This is a digit less than 50 for household appliances and greater than or equal to 50 for professional appliances.

The list of household appliances is a limitative list, whereas the list of professional appliances is an illustrative list.

If an appliance does not appear in the list, this does not necessarily mean that it is not subject to the Recupel contribution. It could mean that the product is not explicitly listed in the limitative list of household appliances or has not been included in the illustrative list of professional appliances. When in doubt, you can launch an online search via the product search engine or submit a product enquiry at www.recupel.be/productsearchengine

For household appliances, an 'all-in' contribution is charged. The income from these contributions is used by Recupel to organise the collection, sorting, treatment and recycling of electrical waste in Belgium.

For all professional electrical and electronic appliances, an 'administrative contribution' is charged when the product is placed on the market. This contribution covers the costs incurred by Recupel for administration and reporting, but not those for collection and treatment. The costs for transporting and processing these appliances will be calculated when the discarded appliance is supplied for processing.

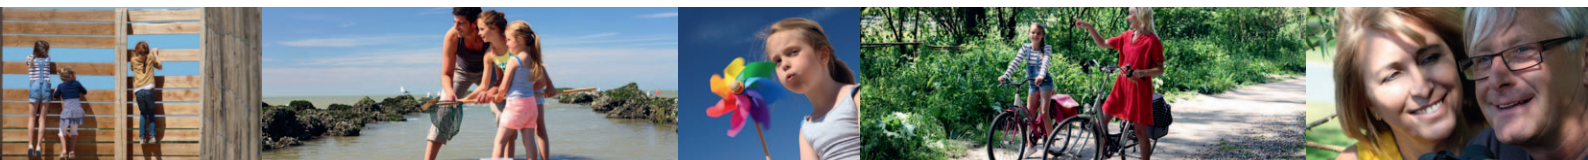

Are you a professional waste disposal contractor? Then we strongly advise you to work with one of our Recupel partners. They are authorised collectors/certified processors. They work under the terms of a so-called 'Charter'. Contact and ask them to send you a quotation for the collection and/or treatment of your discarded electrical and electronic appliances.

You can find all information on our website www.recupel.be, under 'At work/Where do I leave WEEE from my company?/Not yet working with a collector?'.

Notes:

- Electrical and electronic appliances listed in the detailed appliance list, integrated into caravans and motorhomes of more than 3.5 tons, are subject to a Recupel contribution in accordance with the appliance list.
- The Recupel contribution charged for the appliances listed in the detailed appliance list, also covers the costs of any gas discharge lamps that may be integrated into these appliances. For gas discharge lamp fittings, a Recupel contribution will be applied both on the fittings and on the gas discharge lamp(s) contained in it.

Note : the product search engine should only be used as a help tool. The appliance lists published on the website are the sole valid source of reference.
